NEGLECT OF A STATESMAN-SOLDIER.

"It was one of the strangest as well as one of the meanest denials in human history." So, the New York Tribune still harps on the failure of the government of the United States to send General Leonard Wood to the front in command of a division during the world war. Everybody except The Tribune appears to be pretty well informed that General Wood was left at home because General Pershing, the responsible commander of the forces in the field, preferred Dickman, Bullard, Summerall and other officers, and the subsequent proceedings established that he made discreet selections. Anyway, Major General Leonard Wood could scarcely have performed to better effect had he been at the head of one of Pershing's divisions. Whatever criticism therefore, is aimed at President Wilson, in respect of the neglect to send Wood to France, falls upon John J. Pershing and, indirectly, it is an attack on numerous capable officers who served under him.

General Wood is a good soldier and American people, outside of the Republican party, seem to have cordial regard for him, but the party which he has served would have none of him. He has been an active and faithful party man without neglecting his soldierly duties, but Republican voices, like The Tribune, apparently think that whatever reward he deserves should have come from a Democratic administration. The Republicans would not have him as a candidate for president. They allowed his friends to corral a large number of delegates for him in the Chicago convention, but from the first it was decreed that he should not be nominated. That The Tribune well knows. The Tribune's party is controlled by men like George Harvey and they prefer men like Warren Harding to an American soldier who is also acclaimed an administrator and statesman.

Naturally, The Tribune is eager to have the country forget what happened to Wood when the conference was held at two o'clock in the morning in a room in the Blackstone hotel.

WHERE UNEMPLOYMENT IS POPULAR.

One explanation that so many men are unemployed in the great cities is that many men prefer to loaf where unemployment is popular.

Were a dozen of the able-bodied unemployed in Boston to land in Shrimpsville of Huncetown, some farmer might offer them something to do—with meals, shelter and a small wage.

Not to all, perhaps not to the majority, but to some, unemployment is more desirable than an undesired and ungenial job.

Three hundred years ago, when this country was a wilderness and every man had to dig or die, many a man died who would not dig. Unemployment solved itself and only the fittest survived. In those days there were no soup-kitchens and bread-lines and the city did not try to care for the unemployed. There was no city and no man had less than he could do in taking care of himself and his own household.

WHAT MIGHT BE DONE.

"Why is it that thousands of shoe workers are out of employment, while millions of our people need new shoes? If the defect lies in the system, why not do away with that system and try a new one?" These questions a correspondent puts to the New York Evening Post.

Were one-fourth of the things done that should be done, no able-bodied man would be out of employment.

Were all the houses repainted and otherwise repaired that should be, were all the lawns and gardens planted, were all the backyards cleaned, all the outbuildings improved or removed, all the trees and shrubs trimmed and fertilized—in Palatka—how many men would be kept busy?

If shoe makers can not be hired to make four dollar shoes, many a man will go nearly barefoot because he can not afford ten dollar shoes.

Was Hurting All the Time
Kidney trouble saps the vitality and strength of man and woman. It causes backache, headache, stiff joints, sore muscles, shooting aches and pains. John F. Brooks, 712 S. 17th St., Omaha Neb., writes: "My back was hurting me all the time more or less and I had a pain in my right side. Since taking Foley Kidney Pills I feel no pain at all. My back feels good and strong, better than it has in 25 years." Also relieve bladder weakness.
